Qadhafi Says U.S. Incursion Triggered Libyan War Alert

By Jim Hoagland

TRIPOLI, May 16 (AP)—Fourteen American warplanes flew deep into Libyan-claimed air space over the Mediterranean sea weeks ago and triggered a Libyan war alert, President Moamer Qadhafi asserted last night.

Libya sent Mirage jets to intercept the U.S. planes, he said. The planes, which were said to have been launched from an American aircraft carrier, finally turned away without incident.

Col. Qadhafi said in an interview in his office at the Azizia Army Barracks.

But he warned that Libya, aided by Algeria and Egypt, was taking "adequate defense measures" against "any future attacks."

He added that if American aerial incursions continued, "we should not be blamed" for what happens.

On the New York Stock Exchange, prices saw-sawed throughout the day. At the close the Dow Jones industrial average was off a fractional 0.37. Details P. 9.

Reading from what he said was a military report of the April 30 incident, Col. Qadhafi said that Libyan radar picked up four unidentified objects flying over "territorial waters" of the Libyan Arab Republic at 10:25 a.m.

Libya claims control over the air space extending 100 miles out from its 1,500-mile-long coastline and has warned planes not to fly in that area without permission.

The United States has rejected the Libyan air space claim.

Col. Qadhafi said that Libyan fighters were ordered to investigate and identified four American planes at 30,000 feet, 60 miles from Tripoli. He refused to say how far from the coast they were when intercepted.

European diplomatic sources confirmed that some kind of aerial encounter took place between large numbers of American and Libyan aircraft late last month, but these sources were uncertain how serious it was.

The risk of an American military confrontation with this North African country in which American oil companies have a billion dollars in investments, has grown since Libyan Mirage fighters fired on an American C-130 aircraft, reported to have been on an intelligence mission about 83 miles from the Libyan coast March 21.

Authoritative foreign sources indicate that the United States is continuing surveillance flights in that area, and has moved at least one Sixth Fleet aircraft carrier into position to provide protection for the reconnaissance flights.

Defense Department spokesman Jerry W. Friedman said there had been no contact between Libyan and U.S. planes since March 21, when the C-130 was fired on. Mr. Friedman said that U.S. planes fly in international air space just as U.S. ships sail in international waters.

But Col. Qadhafi, appearing relaxed for most of the hour-long interview until the subject of American-Libyan relations was broached, said that Libya had no evidence that surveillance flights were continuing.

"We hope this will not happen again," the 31-year-old military leader said.

American-Libyan relations have worsened significantly since the C-130 incident.

The American fighters, which Col. Qadhafi said appeared to have been F-4 Phantomies, because they flew faster than the Mirages that went up to intercept them, quickly increased to 10 and then to 14 and they "flew 40 miles closer to Libya."

"At this moment, the situation became so tense and dangerous that we massed all our troops on alert for the defense of the country," Col. Qadhafi said.

Accused of Yielding to Stans' Influence SEC Chief Resigns Over Role In Cover-up of Vesco Donation

By Robert Siner

WASHINGTON, May 16 (AP)—G. Bradford Cook, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, resigned today—another victim of the burgeoning scandal surrounding President Nixon's re-election campaign.

The resignation came a week after Mr. Cook was named in a federal indictment as allegedly having deleted from an SEC complaint the fact that financier Robert L. Vesco had made a $200,000 contribution to the Nixon campaign.

The charge was made by the grand jury that indicted Mr. Vesco, former Attorney General John N. Mitchell, former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans and Harry I. Sears, a Vesco associate, for conspiring to "influence, obstruct and impede" the SEC's $224-million suit against Mr. Vesco.

Mr. Cook, though not indicted, was accused by the grand jury of yielding to Mr. Stans' influence in deleting mention of the contribution.

Letter to Nixon
In his letter of resignation to Mr. Nixon, Mr. Cook denied all wrongdoing, saying:

"I deeply regret having to tender my resignation as chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, but in the light of unfortunate circumstances now prevailing, I believe it is best to do so."

Mr. Cook had reached this most difficult decision because of my complete respect for the Securities and Exchange Commission and its dedicated staff. I retain my complete confidence in our country, its institutions and myself.

Previously, Mr. Cook had admitted removing the reference to the Vesco contribution but vigorously had denied that it was done at Mr. Stans' behest.

He insisted that mention of the sum was deleted because it was not necessary as part of the suit. Mr. Cook, questioned about it May 15 by the Senate Appropriations subcommittee, testified that he had discussed the Vesco suit with Mr. Stans only once. Later, was a national security matter," the spokesman said in a statement. "The procedure was approved by the President and authorized in individual cases by the attorney general in coordination with the director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation."

The grand jury alleges that the conversations took place during the spring and summer of 1971 when Mr. Cook was general counsel of the SEC. The panel said that it was at that time that Mr.

view of what they termed a serious security breach. Mr. Beecher's dispatch told how the bombing was being conducted without any public protest from Prince Norodom Sihanouk, who was then Cambodia's chief of state.

Mr. Beecher's article was the first to indicate that the Nixon administration was expanding the Vietnam war.

"The President's motives were honorable," one official said. "This had to be stopped and it [the wiretapping] turned out to be for the protection of the innocent." He was referring, he said, to the fact that most of those whose phones were wiretapped were found not to have violated security.

Another government official aware of the wiretapping noted that it had been legal and added: "Hell, yes I was aware that it was going on. To have done less would have been the highest order of irresponsibility."

Other government sources contended that at least three White House and Pentagon officials who were monitored turned out to be as one put it—"blabbermouths" and were eventually eased out of their positions.

Specific approval for the operation, which involved the tapping of home and office telephones, was granted by J. Edgar Hoover, then the FBI director, and John N. Mitchell, then the attorney general.

Special FBI reports of the overheard telephone conversations were provided to Henry A. Kissinger, Mr. Nixon's national security adviser.

Calls His Investigation 'Inadequate'

Ziegler Blames Only Dean in Bugging Probe

WASHINGTON, May 16 (AP)—The White House contended today that "counsel" John W. Dean 3d bears sole responsibility for a Watergate investigation on President Nixon's behalf that was described as inadequate.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said that Mr. Dean, who was asked for his resignation April 30, "was clearly in charge" of an inquiry that Mr. Nixon ordered following the burglary of Democratic National Committee headquarters here last June 17.

Mr. Ziegler said all subsequent statements by Mr. Nixon and others that no one in the White House was involved in the Watergate affair resulted directly from the work of Mr. Dean and his staff.

Responding to questions, Mr. Ziegler said Mr. Nixon did not personally instruct his former counsel to undertake the investigation nor did he receive a personal report from Mr. Dean on his findings prior to making an Aug. 29 statement that no one then employed at the White House was involved in Watergate.

Mr. Ziegler said Mr. Nixon's directive for the Dean investigation was relayed to Mr. Dean by unnamed members of the senior White House staff.

He said Mr. Dean's findings were conveyed to former presidential assistant John D. Ehrlichman, and perhaps others, who relayed them in oral form to Mr. Nixon.

Mr. Ziegler said that on the basis of what is now known,

"there was a certain inadequacy to the materials provided" by Mr. Dean and his office.

Asked if Mr. Dean had indeed conducted an investigation or had merely pretended to do so, Mr. Ziegler said: "There was no question in any of our minds that an appropriate investigation had been undertaken."

Mr. Ziegler said orders for the inquiry were "clearly communicated to the counsel's office and that was his responsibility."

Asked if Mr. Nixon had talked to Mr. Dean personally about Watergate after his Aug. 29 news conference statement, Mr. Ziegler said, "I don't know."

Airlines Move to End Cut-Rate Student Fares

By Robert Lindsey

NEW YORK, May 16 (AP)—International airlines moved yesterday to cancel cut-rate "student" fares to Europe, a move that could disrupt vacation plans for thousands of under-30 travelers this summer.

Pan American World Airways said that it would discontinue the discounts on three routes where they now apply—between the United States and Brussels, Amsterdam and Helsinki—on June 1. Icelandic Airways said it would end the discounts on June 20 on its flights between New York and Luxembourg.

Despite these comments, there was uncertainty about the exact timing for the end of the discounts, which permit travelers under 30 who declare that they are students to fly to Europe for $100 to $150 less than the lowest generally available excursion fare. The "youth" fare, for anyone—student or not—between the ages of 12 and 23, is not affected.

Pan Am said its decision to abolish student discounts June 1 was in response to information it had received from Belgium's Sabena Airways, that it intended to end the discounts on that date.

Subsequently, however, Sabena—which two years ago introduced the first transatlantic student fares and touched off a flurry of price-cutting among international airlines—said that it was reviewing the timing of an announcement. This was believed to be partly because members of the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board said they would require at least 30 days' notice before permitting the cancellation.

"Such short notice, this is a disgrace," said A. B. Reig, president of Sola Travel, an agency with a large student clientele. "It affects at least 1,000 passengers for us, and I bet conservatively, it affects 25,000 across the country."

"Student" fares are available to passengers from 12 through 29 years old if they can produce a student identification card. Forged cards are common, and many nonstudents over the last two years have used the discounts improperly. A New York Amsterdam student ticket costs $300 round-trip in the off season and $220 in the summer. "Youth" fares are generally about $40 higher.

They don't have international contests between distillers any more. But, you can be sure, Jack Daniel's Whiskey won more than their share back in the days when they did. For instance, the medals shown here were won at Liege in 1905, at Ghent in 1913 and at the Anglo American Exposition in London. ## U.S. Urges Europe to Stress More Than Regional Interests

STRASSBOURG, May 16 (AP)—President Nixon's administration wants Western Europe to take more responsibility in world affairs and not limit itself to regional interests, the Council of Europe was told today.

John N. Irwin 2d, U.S. ambassador to France and former under secretary of state, delivered this message in a speech to the consultative assembly, composed of legislators from the 17 member nations.

Earlier its members heard Italian Premier Giulio Andreotti predict that by 1975 a new balance will appear in world affairs and that Europe would have to play its part.

Mr. Irwin said, "Both in economic relations and in wider diplomatic contexts we often get an impression that Europe wishes to define its interests and responsibilities primarily in regional terms. Sometimes Europeans foster such an impression by arguing the primacy of regional necessities over possible global solutions."

"We in fact would welcome a wider than regional definition of interests by individual European countries or by Europe as a whole."

He said Henry Kissinger, the President's security adviser, had been widely misunderstood as urging that Europe stick to its regional affairs.

Mr. Irwin also tried to get the United States to the point of: "The Common Market's farm policy."

● Get one-sided concessions on trade to help its international balance of payments.

● Use international monetary reform as a "bludgeon" to get trade concessions.

● Use the presence of U.S. troops in Europe as a bargaining lever on trade and monetary reform.

In another development, the assembly members voted to press their governments for tougher action against international terrorists. There were no contrary votes among the 140 members.

Jail Terms of 2,000, 10,000 Years in Texas

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, May 16 (UPI)—A jury yesterday sentenced a man convicted of killing a policeman to 2,000 years in prison. Monday, a judge issued a 10,000-year prison term to another man convicted of killing an officer.

Despite the length of the sentences, the two men will be eligible for parole in 20 years.

Only one member abstained. The action is not binding on the 17 member governments.

The legislators urged their countries' leadership "to use all their political and economic influence to dissuade the states concerned from pursuing a policy which allows terrorists to prepare their acts or to reside or to find asylum in their territory."

The debate made it plain that the legislators were directing their attack against the Arab states. Karl Oseretka, the Austrian Socialist who drafted the recommendation, said:

"The real solution lies in the hands of certain Arab governments which provide indirect or direct financial assistance to terrorists."

Saigon Reports Heavy Toll In Terrorist, Army Attacks

SAIGON, May 16 (AP)—Terrorist attacks and fighting along South Vietnam's central and northern coast took a large number of casualties, the Saigon command said today.

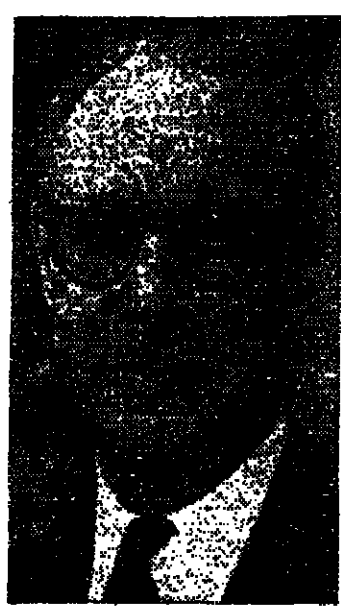

The command reported that 14 persons were killed and 40 were wounded last night when Communist terrorists exploded a bomb in a crowded outdoor movie theater near the northern provincial capital of Tam Ky, 40 miles south of Da Nang. The dead were 12 civilians and two military; 35 civilians and five military were wounded, a communiqué said.

The Saigon command also reported a series of clashes with Communist troops farther south, along the central coast. Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien, chief spokesman for the command, said that government infantrymen early today sighted Communist troops carrying ammunition and weapons through Binh Dinh Province on the central coast.

The infantrymen killed 38 of them, Col. Hien said, and a quantity of weapons and ammunition was seized. Two government infantrymen were wounded in the action, he said.

Negotiators on Europe Troops Ready to Discuss the Agenda

By Don Cook

VIENNA, May 16.—Three and a half months of preliminary talks to the preliminary stage of East-West negotiations on reducing military forces in Europe ended here today. Delegates from 19 nations now get down to business to decide what to call their conference and what to talk about.

Two days of formal speech-making in plenary sessions, held in the main conference room of the International Atomic Energy Agency headquarters here, have revealed next to nothing about how either side intends to approach the basic questions of force reductions.

According to sources in a NATO delegation, the NATO countries deliberately avoided going into matters of substance in order not to give away any cards in the working out of an agenda. There is no question that an agenda can be extremely important in shaping the outcome, since presumably it will fix the forces and the geographical areas to be affected by the negotiation, the types of weapons and the arrangements for control and verification of force reductions.

Status of Hungary

It has taken since Jan. 31 simply to agree to disagree about the status of the participants in the negotiations. The Hungarians successfully insisted on relegating Hungary to observer status over the long-fought objections of the NATO powers. But Western delegates now hope that progress will be a bit more brisk, and that an agenda can

Brezhnev Cuts Down Smoking - In Moderation

BONN, May 16 (AP)—Leonid I. Brezhnev admits that he cheats on the device that he is supposed to help cut down his smoking.

The 68-year-old general secretary of the Soviet Communist party made the confession during a recent interview with editors of the West German weekly news magazine, Der Stern. It was his first interview with Western newsmen inside the Kremlin.

Mr. Brezhnev showed the Germans a cigarette case with a time lock intended to slow his smoking. If the case does not open soon enough, "I have a reserve pack in the other pocket," he admitted.

The Soviet leader travels to West Germany on Friday for meetings with Chancellor Willy Brandt. He is scheduled to visit the United States June 18-26 for a meeting with President Nixon.

Defense Firms' Profits Seen Too High Even After Refunds

By Michael Getler

WASHINGTON, May 16 (WP)—Of 131 U.S. defense contractors who were forced to turn back some of their profits last year, "approximately 64 were allowed to retain profits exceeding 50 percent of their company's net worth even after the refund, according to government figures made public yesterday by Sen. William Proxmire, D., Wis.

In 49 cases, the firms retained profits in excess of 100 percent of their net worth. Sen. Proxmire said, "Twenty-two firms made more than 200 percent, four more than 500 percent and one nearly 2,000 percent profit in dealing with the Pentagon."

In contrast, Sen. Proxmire said, average annual profits on stockholders' equity (which he said closely approximates net worth) for all manufacturing firms ranged from 18 to 20 percent.

Almost all of the defense firms involved are small and medium-sized companies, many of them making bombs, fuses and ammunition for the Pentagon. One of the best-known ones is Trans World Airlines, which has military airline and maintenance contracts.

The senator based his statements on a list of defense contractors charged by the government with making excess profits in fiscal 1972 and required to make refunds to the government.

Such a list specifying the companies and the amount of refund and making various profit comparisons — had never been made public before. Its release stems primarily from a successful suit by Georgetown University law students.

Sen. Proxmire, according to an aide, plans to introduce legislation to change the guidelines under which the renegotiation board set up by Congress operates. The intent would be to give greater weight to profits measured in relation to a firm's net worth.

Defense Department officials had no comment on the suit. Sen. Proxmire's statement, Officially at the renegotiation board said in general they had no argument with the senator's interpretation of the figures and agreed that while return on sales was a widely used "analytical tool" it was not a very precise one.

Officials noted, however, that laws require the board to use about six different factors in profit reviews of all firms doing $1 million a year or more in business with the government.

As Sen. Proxmire issued his statement a major group of government contractors issued its own criticism of the government.

The Aerospace Industries Association said there was growing concern among many U.S. manufacturers.

Mr. Kohl, like Mr. Barzel, is expected to recommend that the party accept the fact of Mr. Brandt's eastern treaties, and work to improve them. But a strong conservative group, led by the Bavarian wing of the party under Franz Josef Strauss, does not support that stand.

Mr. Kohl's one advantage over Mr. Barzel appears to be that he is relatively unencumbered by battles within the party.

Mr. Kohl's all-but-assured takeover of the party leadership does not mean that he automatically will be the opposition candidate for chancellor in 1976. He said that this decision should be put off until 1974, at least. Nor does it appear that his takeover will resolve the factional strife which, to some observers here, is tearing the party apart.

By Shooting Across Border Rhodesia Says Zambia Troop Killed 2 Canadian Women

SALISBURY, May 16 (Reuters)—Rhodesia today accused Zambia troops of shooting dead two Canadian women tourists and wounding an American yesterday as they walked along a deep gorge on the Rhodesian side of the Victoria Falls.

In another incident, a white Rhodesian man was killed yesterday when his vehicle detonated a land mine in a northwestern game reserve, near the Zambia border, it was announced today.

A brief communiqué named the man as Sydney Everett and said his companion, J. H. Sharp, had been injured, but not seriously.

Mr. Everett was the 10th civilian and the seventh white to be killed since the current spate of guerrilla activity began last December. These figures do not include the two Canadian women killed yesterday, which Rhodesia blamed on Zambian soldiers.

In the Zambian capital of Lusaka, a statement issued after hours of meetings by Zambian government officials said the alleged shooting of the tourists was being investigated. It said the government had been contacted by the Canadian High Commission and the U. S. Embassy.

A Rhodesian police spokesman said automatic fire was opened on a party of four tourists from the Zambian bank of the Zambezi River, the boundary between Rhodesia and Zambia.

He told reporters that the two women and an American couple, Mr. and Mrs. John Caruthers, of Troy, Ohio, were walking along the river bank at the bottom of a 300-foot-deep gorge. Across the river is a Rhodesian power station.

Three Hours of Shooting
Firing from the Zambian bank started soon after 2 p.m. and continued sporadically until about 5 p.m., with intermittent single rounds and bursts from automatic weapons, the spokesman said.

One of the Canadian women—whose names were not made public—was killed instantly. The other was hit and fell into the deep pool of flowing water. Her body has not been found.

Mr. Caruthers, 38, was seriously wounded in the stomach and sustained other wounds from shrapnel and bullets ricocheting off the rocks.

He and his wife, Carol, 35, took cover behind the rocks while the firing continued. She was not injured.

A rescue team of police, African trackers, National Park men and volunteers reached Mr. and Mrs. Caruthers toward dawn. A Rhodesian Army helicopter later brought them out of the gorge and to a hospital.

The Canadian woman's body was moved into the shade by the rescuers, who did not want to risk bringing it out if they were going to be fired on from the Zambian side during daylight, the spokesman said.

The Rhodesian government has asked for a Zambian government guarantee that rescue teams will not be attacked, but this assurance had not been given, a government spokesman said.

"Irrefutable Proof"
A government statement said there was "irrefutable proof" that Zambian troops—and not African guerrillas—were responsible for the attack on the tourists.

Neither Canada nor the United States has diplomatic links with Rhodesia and sources in Lusaka said this made it difficult for either country's mission in Zambia to immediately obtain an objective report on the shooting.

The incident is the second this year in which Zambian troops are alleged to have opened fire on the border and killed civilians. On Feb. 9, a white Rhodesian fisherman was killed while on a boat on the Zambezi. An incident on the Zambezi had been in Zambian waters and Zambian troops were responsible.

In another recent incident, elderly West German tourist was killed on a bridge spanning the river near the falls when it was later freed.

Tension on Border
White-ruled Rhodesia and black neighbor have been at odds for months.

Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith closed the border with Zambia late last year after clients along it, cutting off Zambia's only rail to the sea.

When he ended his order soon after, Zambian President Kenneth D. Kaunda retorted that the border stay closed, this time from Zambian side, and that Zambians would find other ways for its exports—mainly copper and imports.

Among countries which offered help to Zambia to develop alternative trade routes is Canada, which has made a $8 million loan.

New Blasts Shake Cities In N. Ireland

BELFAST, May 16 (AP) Guerrillas hit Northern Ireland with a wave of bombings and brought the city back to first time in several weeks.

No casualties were reported in the explosions, which were aimed at the city's main thoroughfare and the city's second city.

But some security forces believed the Irish Republican Army's Provisional wing planning a bomb blitz in the province during political campaigning for local government and assembly elections scheduled for the next six weeks.

The IRA is banned from using candidates in the elections. The guerrillas returned car bomb to the city will 150-pound charge hidden in sedan driven past army checkpoints to York Street, Belfast's main thoroughfare.

It was the biggest explosion in the heart of the city since the 1969 riots. The auto was parked outside a paint store. An alarm warning telephoned 11 minutes before the blast gave police time to clear the area.

Later, troops discovered a bomb in a parked car in City Hall and detonated it. Bombs went off in London and Dublin were defused.

William Whitelaw, the British administrator in the province, commuted the death sentence of a Belfast Catholic teenager convicted of killing a soldier. Liam G. Holden, 19, will serve life imprisonment.

Mr. Whitelaw's action, second reliever he has in the past year, followed a vote in British Parliament Monday to abolish the death penalty in Northern Ireland.

AS, Canary Islands, May 16 (Reuters)—A pontoon raft carrying six women and five men, bound for the Yucatan peninsula of Mexico, was battered by the sea after leaving Las Palmas in the Canary Islands. The crew quickly rigged up an emergency rudder, using grass twine. The crew members, six women and five men, were now very tired, he told amateur radio operators here.

He said the raft, the Acali, was currently drifting at a rate of only one and a half knots. The raft set out from here last Saturday, bound for the Yucatan peninsula of Mexico. The voyage was expected to last some three months.

French Lebanon Orders Hundreds Of Arabs to Leave Country

BEIRUT, May 16 (UPI)—Lebanese authorities have ordered several hundred people to leave the country for various violations of security regulations imposed in the wake of Lebanese-Palestinian guerrilla clashes, official sources said today.

The reports of the deportation orders came as troops, backed by armored cars and tanks, maintained guard in Beirut and other strategic regions. Politicians continued their efforts to reach agreement with guerrilla leaders on their future conduct.

Official sources said some 35,000 Syrians had left Lebanon voluntarily since the beginning of the Lebanese-Palestinian fighting May 2.

Other foreigners—almost all reported to be from other Arab countries—were expelled under orders from the army command requiring deportation for curfew or other security violations.

Press reports of minor explosions last night in Beirut and the port city of Sidon did not upset the general calm and the return to near-normal conditions.

An army statement broadcast by the Beirut radio said rumors of a clash between troops and guerrillas in the northern port of Tripoli yesterday "had no basis in truth whatsoever."

In Beirut and five other cities the army lifted curfew between 6 a.m. and 7 p.m.—the longest continuous break since the government imposed the curfew at the outbreak of the clashes.

Press reports said the border with Syria, closed May 7, when the Lebanese government declared a state of emergency, has been partly reopened and the Syrians were permitted any Arabs, with the exception of Lebanese and Palestinians living in Lebanon, to cross the border into Syria.

The newspapers said President Suleiman Franjeh was insisting that an agreement on future rights of guerrillas in Lebanon must be achieved before the state of emergency could be lifted.

'B-52 Wives' May Sue to Stop Raids

CHICOFEE, Mass., May 16 (AP)—Wives of Westover Air Force Base men who are stationed in Guam and Thailand have hired an attorney in an attempt to have their husbands relieved of bombing assignments in Indochina.

Attorney Gerald Hegarty said yesterday that a "couple of dozen" women who call themselves "B-52 wives" have not decided whether to take legal action.

"They and their husbands see the bombing in Cambodia as meaningless and fruitless and are interested in ending it," he said. He said the women's husbands were "overwhelmingly career men" who have given their wives "complete approval and complete cooperation" in their efforts.

Love, Says U.S. Radio Priest, Keeps the Dial Going Around

LOS ANGELES, May 16 (AP)—The message is love: love your family, love your friends, love your enemies, love yourself.

"Man: 'You know, sometimes I think that nobody loves me.'"

"Child: 'I will love you, you think of that.'"

"Chorus: 'Come on, break down and love like a kid again.'"

Broadcast nationally on radio and television, these messages come from a tiny office in Los Angeles where, amid old radios and phonographs and posters, the Rev. Edward Wroblewski runs a one-man crusade for love.

Father Wroblewski, of the Franciscan Communications Center, uses his small budget skillfully to get his message on more than 3,500 radio and 750 television stations. The messages run from 10 to 60 seconds. The messages—mostly conversations with children—are so popular in some cities that listeners call the stations and request specific ones.

Uses Attention Getters

Father Wroblewski estimates that not even the nation's largest advertiser could afford all the time he gets free. Colorful packaging, love posters and other attention-getters help him compete with more than 200 other public service campaigns seeking free air time.

A Paulist priest, he was lent to the Franciscans nearly four years ago to devise a new radio campaign. "The Franciscans had been doing radio for 25 years, but most of it was relegated to ghetto-fringe or off-peak-time," he said.

"It took three months to figure out a campaign. The first question was, 'What is the need?' We looked into the drug problem, the breakdown of authority. But something was already being done about them.

"Then we got to thinking, 'Why is there a drug problem or racial bigotry?' It came down to a lack of genuine love for each other. That's why we started the love campaign. It's really an attempt to take some aspect of love and make it real and practical."

Nearly all the radio spots are taken from conversations he has with children at day-care centers. He does his own recording and editing, but for the television spots he calls in a film crew.

Father Wroblewski is a native of Buffalo, N.Y., and a former professional magician. He converted to Catholicism while in the Army and, after his discharge, entered a seminary. His last assignment before coming here was producing a variety show for a Chicago television station.

He said he regards his love campaign as just one facet of missionary work.

"So many commercials are negative and fear-oriented," he said. "It's easy to scare people. We could do it. If you don't do this or that you'll go to hell. It's harder to be positive, but you offer people help."

He is realistic about the campaign. "You're not going to radically change a human being with a 60-second spot," he said. "The challenge is incredible. We use a very broad-based message common to all humans. To really hit home with all these people is difficult."

After the Crisis in Lebanon

The government-guerrilla confrontation in Lebanon has shifted back from a military to a political phase. In the crunch, the Beirut government apparently decided it had neither the military strength to try to destroy the Palestinian guerrillas, as Jordan did in 1970, nor the requisite tolerance of either its own Muslim citizens or its Arab allies. The issue that gave rise to the confrontation, the guerrillas' insistence on maintaining a "state within a state" in Lebanon, remains unresolved. This assures further confrontations. The plight of little Lebanon, caught between the guerrillas and their supporters in Syria on the one hand and the reprisal-minded Israelis on the other, is unrelieved.

The most interesting diplomatic feature of the confrontation surely was the Soviet performance. In both Beirut and Damascus, Soviet ambassadors reportedly were active, warning the former not to push too hard for the Palestinians. This may have been the first instance in which Soviet diplomacy played a Mideast role which used to be standard for British and American diplomacy: exercising an influence on both sides. Whether Moscow's influence was crucial or secondary may not be so important as this demonstration of its new presence. The Soviet Union appears to have acted responsibly, once the crisis came to a boil.

Syria's part in permitting Palestinian guerrillas, whose activities it tightly controls on its own soil, to cross over and attack in Lebanon is of a piece with the contempt it has historically displayed for its small neighbor. Syria regards Lebanon as "south Syria" and has not accorded it diplomatic recognition. Syria by its example of lawlessness, and its Arab allies by their toleration of its acts, in effect set a precedent of interventionism for the Israelis. For it is ridiculous to contend that Israel's interventions are reprehensible but Syria's are not. Damascus makes not even a pretense of acting in self-defense.

Israel's stance in this crisis was, nonetheless, disturbing—in its implications. From the premier down, Israeli leaders declared that actual Syrian intervention in Lebanon would be taken as a threat to Israel sufficient to justify necessary countermeasures. To support these words, Israeli forces opened well publicized "maneuvers" on the occupied Golan Heights.

The security argument, though tenaciously held by many in Israel, is unpersuasive. Given the huge military advantage Israel now holds over all of its neighbors, dinky Syria included, it is far-etched to claim that Israeli security could be threatened by such a Syrian move. By making the claim, Israelis invite scrutiny of their own motives. The Syrians have proven themselves better at controlling terrorist operations launched from their soil than the far feebler Lebanese. By this criterion, Tel Aviv ought to welcome Syrian acceptance of responsibility for southern Lebanon. If the strong Soviet military position in the region lent a certain plausibility to Israeli readiness to intervene in Jordan in 1970, then the diminution of the Soviet military position has removed plausibility from Israel's readiness to intervene in Lebanon now. Friends of Israel will serve it well by pointing out this change.

Defiance on Cambodia...

The nation moved a step closer toward what Senate Majority Leader Mansfield has warned could become "a true constitutional crisis" when a Senate Appropriations Committee accepted its own subcommittee's recommendations and a House-approved prohibition on the transfer of funds for bombing in Cambodia. The administration has already indicated it will ignore such a ban even if it is endorsed by Congress.

Any continuation of the bombing after expected Senate approval of this provision would amount to open defiance of the clear intent of Congress to put an end to U.S. military action in Cambodia. In order to check such an abuse of presidential power and to begin to restore its own integrity, Congress would be obliged to move to a more drastic confrontation by banning funds for U.S. military activities anywhere in Indochina without prior congressional approval, as long proposed by Sens. Case and Church. Their resolution, which even Secretary Richardson said would force him to advise suspension of the bombing, was also approved by the Foreign Relations Committee.

If the President has learned anything at all from the Watergate and allied scandals and the national revolution they have produced, he will act now to avert this ultimate showdown. The White House indication that it will persist in its present policy in unconstitutional defiance of Congress would, if carried out, enormously exacerbate the present tension that is already seriously affecting the political process.

If the system of checks and balances which is the ultimate safeguard of American liberties is to be preserved, the developing constitutional crisis over the administration's persistent arbitrary military involvement in Indochina needs to be resolved decisively in favor of Congress.

...And in Laos

The admission of an administration official that the United States is financing the presence of 15,000 to 20,000 Thai "irregular" troops in Laos offers another shocking illustration of the administration's disregard of Congress and the Constitution.

The funding of foreign mercenaries in Laos is specifically forbidden in an amendment to the Department of Defense authorization bill for 1971. The administration has argued in the past that these mercenaries in Laos were indigenous "volunteers" of Thai origin. But inquiries by Senate investigators and American correspondents have revealed that the "volunteers" were in fact reservists from Thailand, who expected to return there.

In addition to being flagrantly illegal, continuing American support for the Thai mercenaries violates the spirit of the Paris accords and contradicts administration claims that it is disengaging from Indochina, especially if, as a Senate source has indicated, their numbers were drastically increased late last year in anticipation of the Vietnam cease-fire agreement.

Congress obviously must take additional steps to insure that its will is followed to the letter in Laos as well as in Cambodia and elsewhere throughout Indochina.

International Opinion

Nixon's Atlantic Charter

The new Atlantic Charter plan visibly answers a double American purpose. 1. Nixon would like to recast a new Atlantic entry in which the Europe of the Nine would be considered as a regional group with only regional interests, in contrast with U.S. worldwide responsibilities. This would enable Nixon to go back to the easy policy of yore when Washington spoke to Moscow in a language of force in the name of the whole West. The Americans now speak a language of détente and cooperation with the Soviet Union, but still do not want a third party to interfere with this world dialogue, above all if this third party is the Europe of the Nine, an economic power equivalent to the United States and the Soviet Union. This explains the extraordinary insistence of Washington on obtaining an Atlantic summit in Brussels during Nixon's European tour this fall. On this point, Paris remains icy.

2. Monetary discussions on the one hand, and commercial discussions on the other, are going to take place between the Nine and the United States. They are made necessary by the chronic weakness of the dollar and the permanent deficit of the U.S. balance of accounts. Faithful to a strategy they always found successful, the Americans intend to generalize the negotiations and to put in the same package the military protection they are granting Europe and the commercial concessions they are demanding from it. It will fall to Mr. Pompidou to approach Mr. Nixon with all these problems, on which the future of Europe and France depends to a large extent, when they meet in Reykjavik.

Kissinger, Congress and Cambodia

By James Reston

WASHINGTON—In his previous negotiations with the North Vietnamese, Henry A. Kissinger was negotiating from strength, but now, with all U.S. troops and prisoners withdrawn from Vietnam, he is negotiating from weakness.

His objective in the Paris talks is to persuade Le Duc Tho to abide by Article 20 of the Vietnam peace agreement. This required all foreign armed forces to withdraw from Laos and Cambodia, and to refrain from using the territory of these two countries to encroach on the sovereignty and security of other countries. This article has been openly violated by Hanoi and President Nixon has kept up the bombing there to try to compel compliance.

This, however, has put the Congress in an awkward position. It is being asked to approve the allocation of funds for an air war it has not approved, and it knows that voting these funds would amount to an endorsement of the bombing policy. So both the House and the Senate, on the eve of the Kissinger-Le Duc Tho talks, have indicated that they are finally prepared to stop all appropriations for the air war.

A Holding Position

It is not clear what Kissinger can hope to negotiate under these circumstances. The administration has tried to strengthen his position by stating that it will continue bombing for a time even though the House and a

Senate appropriations subcommittee have refused to authorize the transfer of funds from the procurement of new weapons to the air war, but this is merely a temporary holding position.

In contrast to the policy previously reported in this space, Secretary of Defense Elliot Richardson is not saying that the administration will do as it likes regardless of what the Congress says. He has said that refusal of the Congress to allow the transfer of funds would not halt the bombing at once, but he has testified in private before the McClellan committee that if the Congress voted a clear prohibition in the expenditure of money for the air war, the administration would respect that prohibition.

In answer to a question from Sen. John F. McClellan of the Senate appropriations subcommittee, Richardson said: "I am sure, Mr. Chairman, that the administration would not proceed in defiance of any clear-cut congressional action intended to terminate the authority to use funds for continued operations in Cambodia."

Contents of Amendment

The amendment states that no appropriations, past or future, could be used "to finance the involvement of U.S. forces in or over, or from off the shores of North Vietnam, South Vietnam, Laos or Cambodia, unless specifically authorized hereafter by the Congress."

The Congress, having waited so long, now seems in a mood to accept this language or something very much like it, but at least it might save Kissinger the embarrassment of adopting it during his few days of negotiation in Paris.

The administration is not going to get from the Congress what it wants—authorization to continue the bombing and the tactical air support indefinitely.

"We are saying to you," Richardson told the McClellan committee, "if we can go ahead at the present rate during these weeks when Dr. Kissinger is in Moscow and Paris, and until the rainy season, we should have a relatively stable situation through the summer and that the whole situation should be re-assessed then."

Ultimately they come down to a double-barreled question on which neither history nor psychology offers us much guidance: How does a man in a position of high authority recognize when the source of his authority has eroded, and how does he react to that knowledge?

In his forthcoming book, "The Presidency in Flux," former White House press secretary George E. Reedy notes that three of the last six Presidents have found themselves rendered politically impotent inside their last two years in office: Herbert Hoover, Harry Truman and Lyndon Johnson.

Declined to Run

Truman and Johnson responded to the public reaction against Korea, Vietnam and the conduct of their administrations by declining to run for re-election. Hoover tried to overcome the incubus of the Great Depression and was roundly defeated.

But none of these prior cases is parallel to Mr. Nixon's, except in the sense that he has now become the fourth President in the last 42 years to face a fundamental challenge to his authority as Chief Executive.

Authority Has Eroded Nixon's Private Crisis

By David S. Broder

WASHINGTON—A double drama is unfolding in Washington these days, half of it on the public stage and half—the more intriguing half—observed from view.

The public drama of Watergate is the gradual revelation of the dimensions of the conspiracy, in which increasing numbers of high officials are accused of subverting, for their own aims, the electoral, judicial and governmental processes. The testimony and admissions so far and the additional newspaper charges have triggered a tide of resignations, compromised important parts of the executive and judicial branches and paralyzed the operations of others.

At many points, the allegations have pointed to the possible complicity of the President, whose pronouncements on the case have fallen so far to stem the increase in public skepticism about his own protestations of innocence.

The Second Act

While the public drama is still in the early moments of the second act, with many more surprises and plot twists yet to come, Washington's attention is turning increasingly to the other and more shrouded scenario: that unfolding in the mind of Richard Nixon.

Here, the questions do not center on the authenticity of the accusations of a McCord or a Dean, or on the ability of former cabinet members to avoid jail.

Rather, they concern Mr. Nixon's picture of himself, of his place in history, and of his capacity to lead the country in the next 3 1/2 years.

Ultimately they come down to a double-barreled question on which neither history nor psychology offers us much guidance: How does a man in a position of high authority recognize when the source of his authority has eroded, and how does he react to that knowledge?

Declined to Run

Truman and Johnson responded to the public reaction against Korea, Vietnam and the conduct of their administrations by declining to run for re-election. Hoover tried to overcome the incubus of the Great Depression and was roundly defeated.

But none of these prior cases is parallel to Mr. Nixon's, except in the sense that he has now become the fourth President in the last 42 years to face a fundamental challenge to his authority as Chief Executive.

The Voice of History

By Anthony Lewis

beyond what the men who met in Philadelphia in 1787 could have imagined. It is inconvenient to change Presidents in mid-term, it is risky. But the risks are not only one way.

We can live with a weakened presidency, we have done so before, and the presidential mystique is overrated for that. But can we live with ourselves under a leadership that we know is tainted? For the inevitable obscenity about exactly what Richard Nixon did cannot hide what everyone must know: That the lawlessness we call Watergate could not have taken place except in an atmosphere created and permitted by this President.

It is true that no American President has been removed from office, and that is an important gloss of history on the constitutional text. But then no President in office has had so many close associates charged with such grave abuses of power, or has had called into question the very honor of the terms on which he was elected.

In thinking about the difficulties of changing Presidents, we should not forget how a democracy may benefit from a cleansing change in leadership. After the disastrous Suez affair in 1956, Britain changed prime ministers without changing parties. Even that was enough to lift much of the cloud from public life, for all the lasting impact of Suez.

The American system is less flexible than the parliamentary, but it does not condemn us to the rigid embrace of a President unfit for office. The Constitution speaks not only of "removal" but of "resignation." Those words were used again just six years ago, in the 26th Amendment.

Is there any serious possibility of resignation? It is an old, self-denial habit to imagine any man ambitious enough to have become President. But before on a momentous day Richard Nixon put his hand on the sword of voluntary resignation, he decided not to resign in 1960 election. One could include a decision now to resign as a healing of America.

A Way Out

The succession of Presidents to the presidency would be, however, under the doubt about the integrity of the 1972 election. The voters remove that shadow without the country given by rancor. As it happens, Amendment offers a way.

A little-noted section of new amendment provides that there is no Vice President, for example, when succeeded to the president. President shall nominate a successor, subject to confirmation by majority vote of both Congress. If Agnew or Nixon resigns, he would set in motion the process by which such an idea is still being contemplated, but we shall begin opening our minds to constitutional possibilities.

At the Convention, Governor Morris of Pennsylvania at first opposed amendment clause but changed after the debate. He said it was not to be a "silly" idea. "The People are the fount of power. It would be to shroud ourselves to a shroud and patches."

In the Spring of '75 British Chain to Open Paris, Brussels Branches

By Hebe Dorsey

PARIS, May 15 (IET).—The British are serious in the European scene. After the Rich- ards Shops branches in two com- mercial centers outside Paris and rumored negotiations for a Har- rod's in Paris, Marks and Spen- cer has announced the opening of two new branches, one in Paris, the other in Brussels, for spring 1975.

The Paris Marks and Spencer will be on Boulevard Haus- mann in the left half of what is now the CGC store. This will put the British store right in the heart of department store com- petition and neatly across from Galeries Lafayette.

Sales promotion manager Harry Shepherd said today that the store will spread over 25,000 square feet and two floors, "which makes it an average size. Our largest store is three times that big and our smallest a quarter that size."

Depending on their success and "if it all goes terribly, terribly well," Marks and Spencer "might open up in another section of town," Mr. Shepherd said, adding, "We'll know very fast—within three days."

Marks and Spencers, as the store is often affectionately called, has 250 branches, including 10 in Canada. "We're opening our 250th one tomorrow at Oxford, west of London," Mr. Shepherd said. The two European branches are part of a large-scale ex- pansion project. "But we'll stay close to Britain. That is, we'll open in Holland, Denmark and several name towns in France, Italy and Germany will come last," Mr. Shepherd added.

The store also has 40 countries buying its merchandise, including Hong Kong "where we manage to sell British-made shirts," Mr. Shepherd added.

Members of the royal family often shop at Marks and Spencer, which has acquired a reverse snob appeal. Known for its "best value for your money" slogan, it also attracts foreign fans, who cross the Channel for a one-day shopping spree at Marks and Spencer.

The Paris branch will be run by an all-French staff but the manager and some 15 key people will be brought over to England to be trained in the Marks and Spencer ways.

Having settled on the site, Marks and Spencer is now decid-

Plays

"Owners," a play by Caryl Churchill at the Mercer Arts Center Show Theater, originated last year at the Theater Upstairs at London's Royal Court Theatre and "should never have come downstairs to New York," Clive Barnes of The Times declares. It "seems to be trying to be about possession—the possession of physical property and the possession of people and "some of the non- sequiturs are mildly funny" in Barnes's view, "but even then one is laughing at the play rather than with it. In fairness it was not very well presented." Terese Hayden both produced and direct- ed the play. There were "good actors," here including Jacqueline Brooks, Alix Elias and Stefan Gierach, but the acting appear- ed "unduly labored."

"Alpha Beta," a play by E. A. Whitehead about the decline and fall of a marriage, which was first given in London last season (IET, Jan. 29, 1973), opened at the Eastside Playhouse with Laurence Luckinbill and Kathryn Walker as the ill-fated couple. Clive Barnes commented: "The situation is perfectly convincing and the spectacle of a man and woman cornered by life could well be affecting." The play fails, he says, partly because of "slack" staging by John Berry and David Chapman's "uninteresting drab" setting. Then, there was the acting. Laurence Luckinbill "needs a little more charm to be convincingly successful," Barnes says, and the downtrodden wife was presented "in such a down- trodden way that this marital sparring match seemed unequal from the start...presumably not what the author intended."

Paris Bistro Specializing In Wines from Loire Valley

By Jon Winroth

PARIS (IET).—This is a city of surprises. A chance meeting with a baker and the cousin of a friend led to a remarkable bistro à vin in the generally ignored depths of the 14th arrondissement.

The proprietor, Roger Aygaleq, is a likable man with a pleasant café-tabac near the Cité Universitaire. He stands behind a great semi-circular zinc bar facing a pinball machine surrounded by mirror-shard pillars under neon-tube lighting and dispenses some of the finest wines this side of the Loire Valley.

A trip to the Loire revealed that Mr. Aygaleq and three-star restaurateur Charles Barthe in Tours serve the same Vouvray, a golden, flowery, fruity wine with overtones of acacia, almonds and quince, and a touch of sweetness.

Mr. Aygaleq does not come from the Loire but his wife Yvette is from Chinon and related to winegrowers in the region. A cousin of hers makes the clean, dry, fruity white Saumur they serve in their café, Le Baito.

Among other Loire wines are two rosés from Anjou, a dry one made from the Groslot grape and a sweet one made from the Cabernet variety. Another Anjou is an excellent sweet Coteaux du Layon from the village of Thouarcé. It goes beautifully with the delicious plum tarts on a base of hazelnut paste from master baker Jean Chaniron, who also supplies tasty bread to Mr. Aygaleq.

The latter is from Auvergne and related to another outstanding Auvergnat bistro, Bernard Péret of Le Rallye (6 Rue Daguerre), with whom he buys his Beaujolais-Villages and Cotes-du-Rhône, as well as two fine dry whites from the upper end of the Loire Valley: Sancerre and Quincy. All of these and a 1967 Cotes-du-Castillon from Bordeaux are excellent wines, by the glass at the counter or by the bottle at table.

Basically, only sandwiches and omelets are served to accompany the wines, but it is possible to get one of the limited number of portions of whatever Mrs. Aygaleq has prepared for lunch for certain regulars. The other day there was both chicken sautéed with tarragon and Auvergnat tripoux, chitterlings sewed into balls.

But it is the wines in this café that draw the connoisseurs. So far, they are French only, but Americans have a pleasantly infuriating habit of discovering, sooner or later, the best things this city has to offer.

BRIDGE

By Alan Truscott

The role of a nonplaying captain, and to a lesser extent of a coach, can be of great importance in world championship play. The team currently representing North America in the world championship in Brazil was permitted to choose its own captain and coach. The players wisely selected Roger Stern of New York, whose wide knowledge of the game and sharp legal mind are just what the situation requires, and Steve Altkman of New York, one of the brightest young stars on the American bridge scene.

Altkman demonstrated his considerable skill in card play on the diagrammed deal played in the recent Spring Nationals. He held the South hand, and his third-best opening bid of one diamond would be an eccentric choice in standard methods. He was using Precision, so one club, one heart and one spade were unacceptable. A weak no-trump was a possibility, but many experts shy away from this bid when holding two four-card majors.

When West overcalled one spade, North contributed an invitational jump raise to three diamonds. South naturally continued to three no-trump, and West led the heart king. He was not inclined to lead a spade for fear of giving away a trick, a judgment that was right in the short run but wrong in the long run.

East signaled for a heart continuation, so West played the ace and a third round, establishing South's ten as a trick. East shifted to a spade, and declarer won his king. He cashed the club queen and the heart ten, and continued clubs.

Before cashing the 13th club in dummy, the position was:

WEST: ♠ 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2, ♥ A K 4, ♦ 9 8 5 3, ♣ A K 6 4. EAST: ♠ 3 2, ♥ Q 6 3 2, ♦ K 10 6 2, ♣ J 7 3. SOUTH: ♠ A J 6, ♥ A 9, ♦ A 9, ♣ A 10 2. Neither side was vulnerable. The bidding: North East South West Pass 1 ♦ 1 ♣ 3 ♦ Pass 3 N.T. Pass Pass. West led the heart king.

THE SUMMER BEFORE THE DARK

By Doris Lessing. Knopf. 273 pp. $6.95.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

AT the end of "The Summer Before the Dark," Kate Brown returns to her husband and four grown children in London after several months' absence. Her hair looks like a fright wig and she has aged out of all proportion to the time she's been away, but she wears these signs proudly, like a badge. Though she had always enjoyed her well-kept prettiness, she now considers this a seriously delimiting habit of mind and is determined to show her family and her husband her "real self," stripped of superficial embellishments.

The reader may feel that the novel uncomfortably parallels its protagonist. It is often unkind, almost deliberately unappealing, as if the author was too concerned with showing us her "real woman" to seduce our sensibilities with a well-made work of art. Perhaps she has fallen into the famous imitative fallacy: the notion that the form of a work must suffer the fate of its characters.

One can understand her feeling that it is more important for a woman to worry about the state of her soul than the condition of her hair or her clothes—but when that woman happens to be a novelist, she cannot afford to sacrifice her art and rest everything on "authenticity." This is an error that every social revolution seems to encourage. Authors with a cause tend to get so caught up in it that they simply give up passion or ideology without any aesthetic inducement to accept them.

At 45, Kate Brown is a very attractive and efficient wife and mother. She radiates well-being because she feels that hers is a good life and she is the "warm center" of it. But now her youngest son is 19 and may need her absence more than her presence. Her neurologist husband may too. He is going to America on business for four or five months and he has not invited her. The other children are scattering for the summer and there is no reason for Kate to keep house. For the first time in her life, she is "not wanted... unnecessary." She feels the "cold wind" of change. Though he still loves her, her husband can no longer be regarded as her "lover." The emotional exuberance he continues to offer her has been "diminished" in her eyes by the discreet affairs he has with young girls.

It is time for Kate to moulth her wife and her mother and wear another—but what will it be? Can she excavate, like an archaeologist, her 25 years of doing what others want or need and discover her very self? She is full of intelligence and energy—surely she can make a fresh start? In fact, she must, for she doesn't know how to do anything. Her very vitality will consume her unless she finds something for it to feed on.

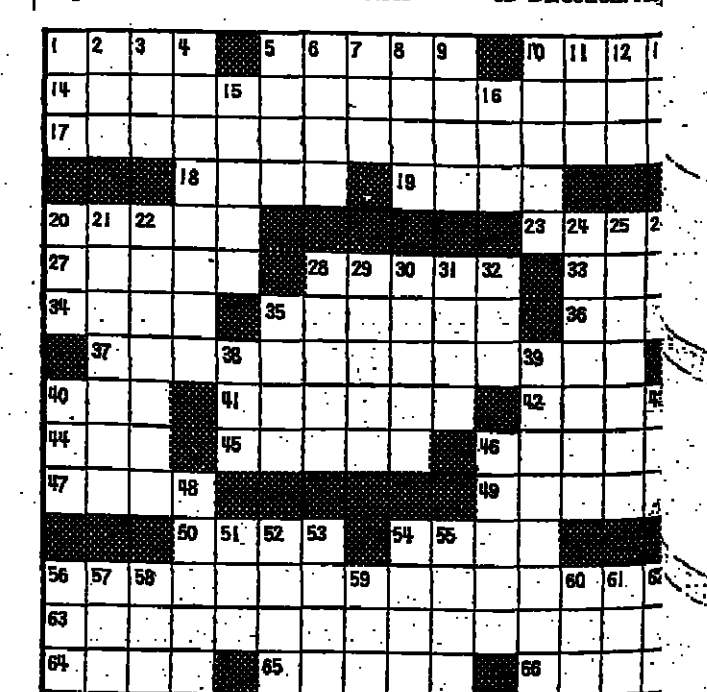

As a temporary answer, or a delaying action, she takes a job. But it turns out to be just another kind of mothering, demanding nothing more than charm, warmth and a knack for arranging amenities for people.

Mr. Broyard is a book for The New York Times.

Otis filed deep to Ken Berry in right field.

The Angels gave Ryan a pair of runs in the first inning. Vida Liner singled off Bruce Dal Canton, and moved to third on a sacrifice and a fly ball. After Frank Robinson walked, Bob Otley and Alan Gallagher drilled successive, run-scoring singles to right. Otley made it 3-0 in the sixth with his fourth homer of the year.

The Royals never seriously threatened to break up the no-hitter until the eighth inning when Gail Hopkins, pinch-hitter for catcher Carl Taylor, punched the ball into short center field. But Randy Meoli raced out from his shortstop position and caught the ball.

In all, the Royals managed only three base runners. Steve Hovley walked in the first and made it to second with a stolen base. But Ryan struck out the side—Patek, Otis and John Mayberry.

Taylor walked with one out in the third, but Ryan fanned Patek, then got Hovley on an easy grounder back to the mound. Paul Schaaf walked with two out in the eighth, just before Meoli made his catch on Hopkins.

Kansas City hit 10 balls to the outfield, not including Hopkins's soft liner. The longest was the final out which Berry, a seventh-inning defensive replacement for Otley, hauled down at the fence.

The California dugout emptied and rushed to congratulate Ryan as Berry grabbed the ball for the final out and held it over his head.

It was the first no-hitter pitched at Kansas City since the major league came here in 1954, and the first by a California pitcher since Clyde Wright no-hit the Oakland A's on July 3, 1970, and the third in Angels history.

stole second and scored on Pat Kelly's two-out double in the 12th inning to give the Chicago White Sox a 6-5 victory over the A's.

Bert Campaneris, who hit a two-run single in the fifth, singled for his third hit with one out in the ninth, stole his third base of the game, and scored the tying run for Oakland on a single by Reggie Jackson after Luis Alvarado's error with two out kept the game alive.

Twins 5, Rangers 3

A solo home run by Harmon Killebrew in the seventh inning and a three-run homer by Rod Carew in the eighth gave Minnesota a come-from-behind 9-5 victory in Texas. The Twins trailed, 5-1, after two innings, thanks to some shoddy fielding which allowed Texas three unearned runs in the second.

Pirates 5, Expos 5

In the National League, Dave Cash singled with the bases loaded in the 11th inning to give Pittsburgh a come-from-behind 9-5 home victory over Montreal, ending a six-game losing streak.

Braves 4, Astros 1

Dusty Baker slammed a three-run homer and knuckleballer Phil Minko pitched a five-hitter in his first start this season to give Atlanta a 4-1 victory in Houston. Baker's homer, his sixth, came after a pair of two-out walks to Derrell Evans and Hank Aaron in the sixth inning.

Giants 4, Padres 2

Chris Speier led off the sixth inning with his fifth home run of the year to touch off a three-run inning and San Francisco went on to beat San Diego, 4-2, on the road.

Reds 4, Dodgers 1

Tony Perez, playing with a sponge taped to a sore thumb, slammed a pair of home runs, one with a runner aboard, to power Cincinnati to a 4-1 home victory over Los Angeles.

Pedro Borbon blanked the Dodgers the final 2-8 innings to preserve Don Gullett's fourth victory against two losses. The save was the fifth for Borbon, who has appeared in 18 games.

Cardinals Finish

Cub Streak at 7

CHICAGO, May 16 (UPI)—Mike Tyson's two-run triple wrapped up a three-run second inning as the St. Louis Cardinals beat Chicago, 3-1, yesterday, ending a seven-game Cubs' winning streak.

Jose Cruz opened the inning with a walk off Cubs' starter Rick Reuschel and reached third on Ken Belter's single. Ed Crosby then grounded to Reuschel, but the pitcher threw low to the plate for an error as Cruz scored. Tyson then banged the ball off the right centerfield wall to score Belter and Crosby.

"I'm awful fast," Oldfield said in a tone of rushed repetition, telling how he had won the 1972 Wyoming, 30-year-old, against the International Track Association's professional tour. Oldfield, "they call me Barney but I don't answer to it"—was in New York as advance man for the IFA manager, which moves into Madison Square Garden June 6. Heterosexual footracing is just what Oldfield is doing at pro level. What makes Oldfield winner on the tour with about $6,000 in prizes so far is his ability to pitch a 16-pound dumbbell 70 feet or so. Still, he never goes anywhere without a pair of spiked shoes, just in case.

In his taste for uninhibited expression and in his vocational background, Oldfield has a lot in common with another champion of distinction, Thorpe. Thorpe was a 12-year-old center fielder in Ypsilanti, Mich. Supported by a father, Ben, who worked one game in the New York-Penn League and retired in tears.

Chances are that Secretariat, the colt, could whip the champion filly, La Prevoyante. And Brian Oldfield, a 270-pound shotputter with blond curls, regularly outruns Wyoming Tyne, holder of women's world records at 50, 60, 70 and 100 yards and 100 meters. Ah, there, Gloria Steinem, stay as sweet as you are, Betty Friedan.

"After that it took me all of 1972 to get back up to 61 feet. At the end of the 1972 indoor season I did 64 feet 1 inch. That was in Montreal at the Canadian Nationals. About as lousy as our nationals.

"I realized I needed some vicious competition so I signed up for a European tour. I think I got to compete in the shotput twice, and three times in the discus. I'd get disgusted and go have a drink. Then I thought, 'The Olympic Games are supposed to be golden. I'm here to do my thing, not argue with old fogies.' I was still waiting up over 70 feet and I knew if I could get that warming up I'd get it in competition someday.

"In Munich, I was reverent. I knew I didn't have enough experience and I was scared. The day of Black September when those Arabs were holding the Israeli hostages I just stayed in my room. There were some candy bars and a slice of pizza and I was waiting up over 70 feet and I knew if I could get that warming up I'd get it in competition someday.

"The next day was bliss. We were supposed to compete but it was postponed. There were all kinds of rumors about pulling out of the Games, letting those rumors destroy all the peace and beauty. It seemed there was no fun left in the world. I wanted to fight, to do what I'd come for.

"Finally, when we got to throw, I did 68-7 1/4, my best competitive distance. It broke Matsun's Olympic record but it was 10 and 1/2 inches short of the gold, and Hovley walked in the first and made it to second with a stolen base. But Ryan struck out the side—Patek, Otis and John Mayberry.

Taylor walked with one out in the third, but Ryan fanned Patek, then got Hovley on an easy grounder back to the mound. Paul Schaaf walked with two out in the eighth, just before Meoli made his catch on Hopkins.
